

My neighborhood

Laura's neighborhood is very quiet. There are many trees, and there is also a park where children from the neighborhood can play.

Laura lives on a street where there are many other kids. All of them often walk and play in the park. They are more than neighbors—they are really friends.

Come out to play!

The sun has come out, and it's very warm. What a beautiful day! As soon as they get up in the morning, many neighborhood kids think about playing in the park. They know there will be many other kids to play with, and all of them can have a lot of fun.

Hold my hand

Julia, John, and Carla are siblings (brother and sisters). Their father takes them to the park so they can play. John is upset because he thinks he's too old to be taken by the hand when they are walking down the street. Julia, however, knows that she is safer if she holds her father's hand.
