“It seems like somebody wanted to turn things upside down,” she said. “Have you thought about turning it back?”

Ariadna and the rabbits started jumping until everything turned back the right way. Now the little animals could reach the carrots easily.

“Was it that easy?” asked the five rabbits. “Sometimes great problems become small if we explain them and try to find a solution,” she replied satisfied.

“What can we do?” asked one of the rabbits curiously.
“Add a stool or... cut the table legs.”
The girl put on a carpenter’s overall and with a saw in her hand, she made the table lower. Then they could all reach the food.

One night, the magic box awoke Ariadna. It was making a banging noise and bouncing on the floor. Then the girl went inside.
“Now what’s wrong, my little friends?” she asked the rabbits.
“We’re scared of the dark.”
