

The little dragon was not afraid of walking with the large dragons with heavy footsteps.

The ground shook nicely
and that made her feel accompanied.

But that morning, when she woke up, she discovered that the cave where she was sleeping was empty.

That made her feel insecure and unprotected.

“Mum?
Dad? Where are you?”

She found two halves of an egg that fitted together perfectly! She only had to climb inside and close it, but it was not that easy. The egg had not grown like she had and it was too small for her.

She tried everything possible, until

the shell was completely broken.
