

Money, money, money!!! I never really thought about it until last week when Dad lost his job. That's when everything changed, including me! Instead of thinking about all the things that I wanted, like those black and white soccer shoes or even a new video game, I started to think about the things we needed.

From that day onwards, Operation Save was in full swing. That meant that whenever we wanted things, like a new pair of soccer shoes, a new video game and even going out for dinner, we would think about it first. Was it something we really needed?

Even dinnertime turned into an adventure! Mom and Dad became experts at using up leftovers. And to make dinner even better, Mom started to make up fancy names for everything she made. Who could have guessed that there were so many recipes for leftover chicken?
