

Mixing colors

"I've finished already! I'm the first to finish the drawing," I exclaimed. "Of course, you've finished! And you should start again. You haven't let the layers of paint dry and all the colors have mixed together," the center supervisor points out to me. "Do you see what happens when you go too fast?"

Queuing for table football

"Not all at the same time!" Shout the older children. "Don't you realize that you can't all play at the same time?" Says one of the parents. "You're not playing well like that," explains a grandmother. Then, my child minder helps us to understand... " While four of you play table football, the others can watch how they play, learn what they do well, what mistakes they make and think about how you will score a goal!"

The secrets of music

Sometimes, grandfather takes me to listen to music. He knows that I behave well and don't speak of get agitated. The concerts are very long, but it's not just music. I look at each musician's face of effort and concentration. I look at how the violin bows move up and down. I eagerly await a bang on the drums. And I laugh slightly when the conductor moves. It's a good show!
