Dinosaurs

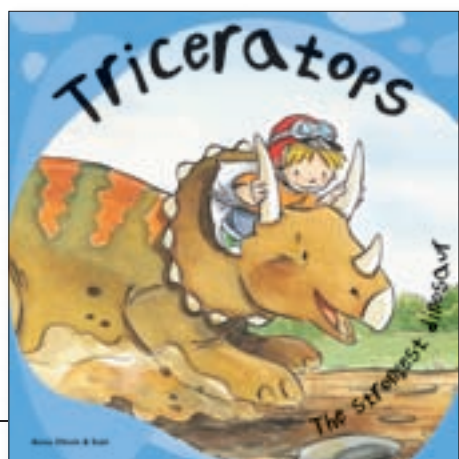

The main character of this series is a boy. In each book, the boy speaks about one of the four dinosaurs and at the very end of the story he discovers that the dinosaur about which he is speaking is a cuddly toy that sleeps with him every night. The text stimulates the reader's imagination and is devised considering the characteristics of each dinosaur, highlighting the features that distinguish it from the others. At the end of the book is included a scientific description of the dinosaur that he is speaking and also a general information about the dinosaurs.

Painters series

The main objective of the series is to increase the children's awareness of the work of some of the most important artists in the world, and we do so in a playful, entertaining and attractive manner. The works of these artists are presented through an invented story that is close to the boys and girls. They won't strictly be biographies, but rather stories based on the key paintings and works of each of the painters selected. At the end of the book, there will be a small biography about each artist with the historical context and artistic movement in which he is set, in order to be able to go much more in-depth regarding each of the painters selected.

Paw prints

Paw prints will take you and your child through some common situations they may experience as a child; A parent or parents going out to work and having to leave them. A big announcement that they are getting a baby brother or sister. A day spent with older relatives and a realization, that the older generation have a great deal of knowledge to share and still know how to have fun. Finally learning about the joy that you can get from an experience you are least looking forward to, learning that sharing can be a wonderful thing. This fun and beautifully illustrated animal series deals with all those situations.

1, 2, 3 suddenly in...

On Martin's eighth birthday, his grandfather gave him a tiny package and said, "I've been an explorer all my life, and now it's your turn to see the world. Here is the key to my secret storeroom where you'll find everything you'll need." In the secret storeroom, Martin found maps and equipment as well as his grandfather's travel album and a strange necklace that came with these instructions: ATTACH STOREROOM KEY TO NECKLACE. PUT NECKLACE ON. CLOSE EYES. NAME DESIRED DESTINATION OUT LOUD. "Amazing!" Martin said. "I can go anywhere in the world!" He attached the key to the necklace, put it on, closed his eyes, and said... Then one, two, three, suddenly...

Bits and pieces of History and Geography

Young children have the capacity to absorb information other than cats, dragons, monsters, robots, etc. The information in the encyclopedia is too long for them to read and for those just learning to read, it is taxing. In this book children will find rhymes easy to read and appealing because of their mellifluous sounds. At the same time, they will certainly enjoy the background stories to the rhymes as they encounter real historical figures and travel to interesting places of geographical importance. This book gives children a window to learn history, geography, culture, music, religion, among others, in a subtle and fun way.

Stories for older children too!

My first bilingual dictionary of sentences

This unusual and charmingly illustrated bilingual dictionary for children teaches kids more than single words, it teaches them complete simple sentences in two languages! Still another unusual feature in this book is its very useful arrangement of sentences into 62 separate themes. Each is presented as a color-illustrated two-page spread.

What can we do

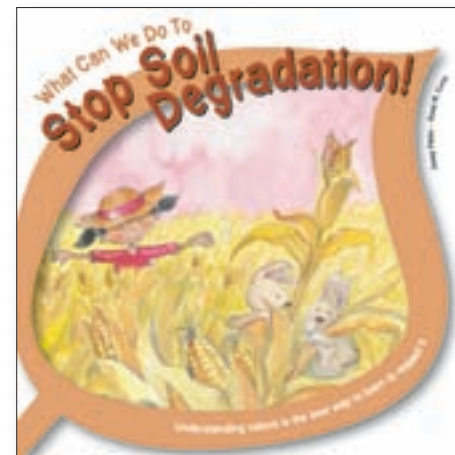

The aim of the collection is to approach the young reader to the environmental risks that affect the Earth, such as deforestation, soil degradation, natural disasters, biodiversity loss...

A panda, called Ginkgo, presents each problem to the children, surprise them with its explanations and make aware them of the need to take care of their own planet. Each book contains a guide for adults and activities conducted by Ginkgo itself where children analyse the contents covered in more detail.

NEW

In this book, Ginkgo shows the forests and trees he visited in his trips around the world: its colours, its forms, the animals that live there, but also the menaces surround them. In many places of the world, they don't look after their trees and exploit them without control. Ginkgo shows the treasures hidden inside the forests and the importance of taking care about them... of stopping deforestation!

NEW

Do you know the land we step is fundamental for Earth's life? Ginkgo shows animals and trees could not live, we could not feed ourselves or we could not admire the amazing landscapes of our planet without a healthy, clean and fertile soil. Contamination, residues or uncontrolled exploitation of natural resources degrade soil... We need to stop soil degradation!

NEW

Nature gets angry as well: the strength of earthquakes or the lava of volcanic eruptions. These natural disasters can swallow villages, burn entire forests, or leave a village without water. Humans are also responsible for these catastrophes because we build in dangerous places and consume natural resources without control. We must know the hazards of nature to prevent its consequences.

NEW

Our planet has an enormous diversity of animals and plants: trees of all length and height, plants adapted to different environments, amazing and marvellous animals... But, do you know some of these species are endangered? Ginkgo shows some of the most threatened plants and animals on the planet. It is an enormous treasure we must save and protect!

Taking care of your planet

The objective of this collection is to improve children's awareness of the need to take care of the environment and to involve them according to their capabilities. Each book covers a different thematic area: How to take care of water and air; how to decrease waste and how to save energy. At the end of each book, there is a guide for adults, as well as some activities to do with the children to examine the content in more detail.

Discover

The titles in the series Discover introduce the young reader to the exciting world of bugs such as ants and spiders. A small main character guides the readers through the pages. The beautiful illustrations and accompanying text awake the children's curiosity, show them a range of different aspects of the way of life and explain the important role that the animal in question plays in the ecosystem. Each book includes interesting facts and the most important ecological environmental aspects of the animal.

The numbers of life

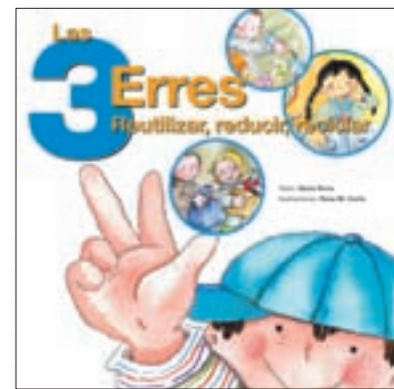

Through numbers, the different titles in the series teach the youngest to pay attention to the world around them and take care of it. We must take care to enjoy the planet we share with many other living beings and where we will live for many years, until we grow old and wise. This is an innovative approach which encourages children to understand science from their own first-hand experiences.

Science speaks about...

Kids can observe how each living thing depends on the others and the place where they live. They will learn that our planet looks blue because of the seas and oceans. Start to understand the Universe, where some planets are huge balls of gas, while others like the Earth, are made of solid rock. Learn about the changes in our climate and how important the weather is in our lives. These books are well-written and include amusing illustrations that introduce children to the wonders of nature.

Let's take care of...

Titles in the Let's Take Care of... color-illustrated series introduce younger boys and girls to the fun and responsibility of pet ownership. Each book tells the story of a boy and girl who get a pet and learn how to care for it. These charming books emphasize that acquiring a pet is an exciting adventure for children, and it often makes little difference whether the new pet is as tiny as a frog or as large as a hound. Kids who read these books will share the excitement of the stories' children as an introduction to getting a pet of their own. A Guidelines section supplements each story with advice from the vet and information on pet care that is geared to children's capabilities. Parents and kids will want to read that section together.

On the way to school

The characters in this series are four children from different countries, concretely: A girl from Japan, a boy from the United States, a boy from India and a girl from Senegal. The theme of all these stories is the path that each child takes to go from their home to school. The path enables us to discover and understand important aspects such as different religions, languages, gastronomies, modes of transport, games, ways of thinking and dressing... In short, the most significant aspects of each culture.

Many secrets are fun to keep –for instance, a surprise birthday gift for Mom. But some secrets make kids feel bad. They are best shared with parents.

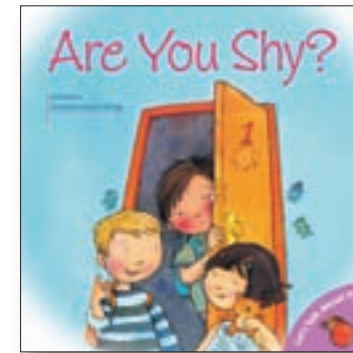

Young children are confused and hurt when their parents decide to divorce. This sensitively written book assures boys and girls that children are in no way responsible.

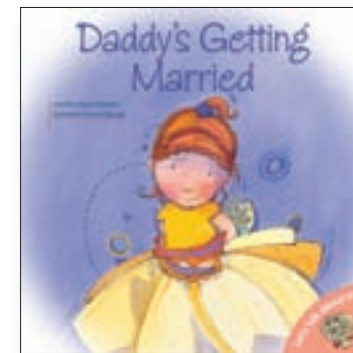

It is normal when children are troubled by death of a pet or a loved one. This story tells how a little boy learns to accept the death of his pet dog.

This appealing book celebrates the differences between people of different races and ethnic backgrounds.

This book advises younger kids on ways to cope with a common problem: shyness.

Children of divorced parents are sometimes troubled when one parent decides to remarry. This book offers them reassurance.

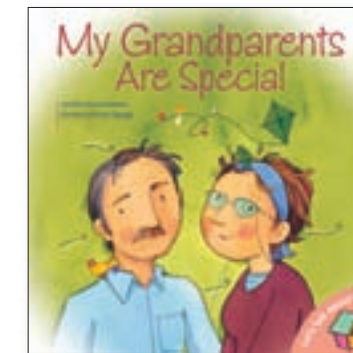

The main character in this story discovers that it isn't easy living with autism, through the experience of having an autistic brother. He also discovers that being autistic doesn't mean being less intelligent...

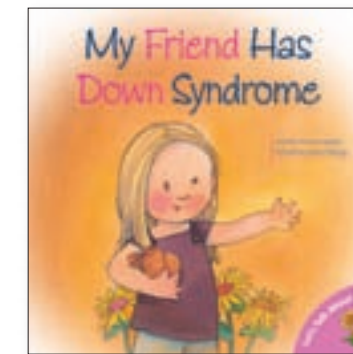

The story is about a mother that goes back to work after her maternity leave. It is hoped that after reading this text, children will have a better understanding of the many reasons which surround a family's decision for both parents to work outside the home.

Getting lost in a public place is a frightening and potentially dangerous experience for younger children. This book tells children and parents what to do.

This book explores the extraordinary loving relationship that typically exists between very young children and their grandparents.

This is a story of friendship. It tells a story about two young kids who become best of friends despite their differences. This inspiring story is a step in the right direction of eliminating existing barriers between children with Down Syndrome!

This book encourages parents to be open, honest and straightforward with their children regarding their diagnosis. Children will be able to work through their own anxiety a lot easier when they know that they can look to you for support.

Live and learn

Books in the Live and Learn series take a child's point of view and especially the view of children who either suffer from some physical challenge or lack self-confidence in going about their everyday activities. They encourage kids never to be afraid of a challenge. Following each story are four pages of suggested activities that relate to the book's theme. A final two-page section offers advice to parents.

A child's desire to be like the other kids and just have fun is put to the test. But first he needs to learn how to become independently mobile while being confined to a wheelchair before he can focus on mastering an activity such as basketball.

Some of the realities of being a kid are explored through the eyes of a child. At first it seems that being a kid is a tough job and that grown-ups have it easy but after careful consideration, one realizes that being a kid isn't so bad after all and that becoming a grown-up can wait!

This story's little boy plays on a football team. When they forget to play fair, a boy on the opposing team is injured. They feel badly about the accident and come to realize that being a good sport is more important than winning.

This is a story that many children can relate to. It is about a child and his family who go through the emotional experience of moving. Although saying goodbye to a home and old friends can be difficult, making new friends and having a new place to live can be exciting.

The child in this story knows the alphabet, but she sometimes has trouble putting all the letters together to read words. No matter how hard she tries, she often mixes up the letters or writes them backwards. She's unhappy until her teacher explains that she has dyslexia, and that with special help she will overcome her reading problem.

Lana is 10 years old and she's deaf. Throughout the story, Lana discusses what it is like to be deaf and some of the things that she uses to help her learn at school and to communicate with others. Although Lana uses a hearing aid, she can't always hear everything clearly but it doesn't stop her from being a child.

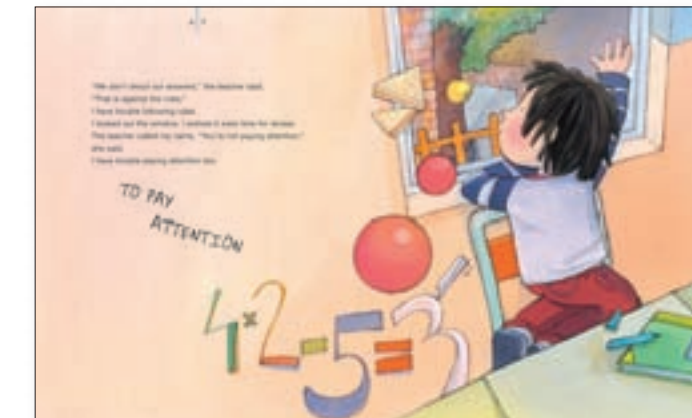

There's a boy in school who can't sit still. He always forgets to raise his hand. He doesn't wait his turn. He can't follow the rules. At recess the other kids don't want him on their team. The boy wants to do all those things. The trouble is he can't. He has ADHD.

The boy in this story has always loved visiting his grandfather. But lately Grandpa has been different. He can't take the boy fishing or go on walks with him anymore. Grandpa doesn't look sick but a nurse comes to the house to take care of him. What is going on? He has Alzheimer's disease.
